

Opportunities of the Community

In all cases, Wisdom Counsel engagements rely on the fundamental principle that the client brings with them a profound wisdom indigenous to their unique self, situation, and concerns.

This is held as equally true when working with teams and other groups, formal and otherwise. These collectives contain the seeds of their own greatest possibilities – Wisdom Counsel nurtures these seeds to bloom and blossom. This is an exceptional process for both building team coherence, as well as collaborations to create, problem solve, vision, succeed and excel.

Drawing on the principles of innate intelligence and the value of multiple perspectives, a Wisdom Engagement with your team or group facilitates the emergence of the unique collective insight. This process allows the group to see with clarity both their specific commitment, opportunity, and importantly, what may be required from outside the group to empower successful outcomes.

When engaged in this way, each member of the collective is better able to see their own unique value in the collaboration as well as seeing more clearly their own unique growth opportunities. This results in higher levels of authentic ownership and engaged responsibility taking by constituent members, and thusly greater possibilities for what can be produced, learned, and aspired to.

What is the process?

When it comes to working with collectives, the process is defined by the unique specific need and circumstance. Our initial concern is to build a clear understanding of intention; this is sometimes a simple matter coming from an authority figure, however, often the clarification of intention is a group process that can be brought about either through individual interviews, collective engagement, or a combination of these.

Our service consulting engagement begins either with the manager, team lead, or point person for the group. From there we may choose to define process, but we may also decide to begin with a group interview as a starting point.

For longer-term engagements, or specifically for building team coherence, it can be useful to begin with individual STAGES Assessments and, in most cases, formal Debriefing sessions with individuals to further unpack those Reports.

Having established a foundation of clear and coherent intention, the process opens up quickly to a dialogic creativity that can move easily between reflective inquiry and decisive action.

By its nature, a Wisdom Counsel engagement will likely have flashes of inspiration and insight, however as we are drawing on innate wisdom and intelligence as the process unfolds the experience can become much more that of "having known all along," it is this quality that instills the deep sense of ownership and responsibility that we so value.

As your facilitator, it will be my role to guide you on a path of insight with integrity, an eye to the ethics of our journey together, and to safeguard your sense of safety and confidence throughout the process.
